3. Digital Citizenship Plan
 - Cami shared our past digital citizenship plan. Content keeper is our filter device and works based on web classification. Students do not have access to YouTube. Teachers can ask for sites to be allowed if needed. There is a district person this goes through. District is working on having set protocols for elementary school students. This has been in place in secondary, but now that we are one to one, this has become priority as well. Student chrome books that go home are still set to content keeper protocols as of right now. Filtering is required by the legislature.
 - Netsmartz is a program we use to teach digital citizenship. We do have to pay for that. They do an upper grade and lower grade assembly this year. Our computer teacher also does digital citizenship lessons each month on top of this. Our NOVA program done in 5th grade also hits on this as well as the school counselor when she visits.
 - Protocol when something inappropriate is accessed on a school computer, District contacts school. School meets with student and parents. Because of the signed computer use agreement, the school is allowed to take away computer access. The usual protocol is to take away a month of computer access. However, every issue is dealt with on a case by case basis.
4. Wellness Plan

Our Wellness Coordinator at our school is Kristin Emery. The district runs a wellness program for teachers. The school has added a student wellness room this year. The funding for this came from the district/state as well as a grant. Around $2500 has been spent on it so far. Funds for suicide prevention and substance abuse prevention are earmarked for wellness in the districts as well. School is considering starting a running club as the weather warms. As students track their laps they can earn prizes at certain checkpoints. Someone also asked about how the Wellness Room is used. The room is used as both a place for students to calm down, focus, or as a reward. They stay for 15 minutes or less so they don't miss a lot of class time. We then went and saw the Wellness Room. This is open if anyone would like to see what the room looks like.
